RISK FACTORS

The sections “1.1 Risks related to the Issuer”, “1.2 Risks related to the Borrower” and “1.3 Risks related to the cover pool” beginning on page 14 of the Base Prospectus is hereby deleted in its entirety and replaced by the following:

1.1 Risks relating to the Issuer

Liquidity risk

All loans by the Issuer to the Borrower under the Uncommitted Facility Agreement have the same maturity (unless they are rolled over) and the same repayment terms as those applicable to the Notes that finance the loans.

Accordingly, unless an event of default (as defined in the Uncommitted Facility Agreement) occurs, the Issuer will not be exposed to any liquidity risk in respect of the Borrower’s debt and the Notes.

If an event of default were to occur, leading to a claim under the guarantee, the Issuer’s liquidity would be derived from the home loan receivables included in the cover pool and the underlying home loans. There is a risk of a mismatch between the maturities and repayment profiles of the home loan receivables included in the cover pool and the maturities and repayment profiles of the Notes. Such a mismatch could create a potential need for liquidity at the level of the Issuer.

At 31 December 2025, the cover pool comprised 302,610 loans with an average retention period of 80 months and a weighted average residual term of 182 months. At 31 December 2025, the net principal amount of the Issuer’s Notes was €20,966 million. The bonds mature at various dates up to April 2044.

Although the Issuer is legally required to ensure that its liquidity needs are adequately covered at all times using a number of tools such as, but not limited to, the provision of cash collateral prior to maturity, the legal liquidity reserve, staggered maturities and the sale of all or some of its home loan receivables, there is a residual risk that these mitigating measures may not be sufficient.

If the Issuer is unable to cover its liquidity needs, this could have a negative impact on its ability to fulfil its obligations under the Notes in a timely manner, especially its interest payment obligations.

In view of the foregoing, the Issuer believes that the probability of such a risk occurring is very low, but that the impact of such risk could be high.

Operational risks relating to the Issuer’s dependence on its parent company

La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH does not have any employees, information system or organisational structure to support its operations. It relies entirely on the resources provided by its parent company, La Banque Postale.

An internal governance structure has been set up to monitor the Borrower’s realisation and performance of the services in accordance with the related agreements. The agreements between La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH and La Banque Postale and the covered bond programme documents provide for mitigation or substitution measures and/or cash collateral upon occurrence of documented trigger events (such as the asset cover test or a downgrade of the Borrower’s credit rating).

The Issuer’s operational capacity to make principal and interest payments on the Notes will depend mainly on the ability of La Banque Postale, in its capacity as servicer, service provider, manager and bank of the Issuer’s accounts, to fulfil its payment obligations to the Issuer. It will also depend on the Borrower’s ability to transfer additional home loan receivables as collateral under the Collateral Security Agreement, up to the amount required to satisfy the asset cover test (“Asset Cover Test”).

The legal framework for home financing companies and the covered bond programme documents require implementation of mitigation or substitution measures and/or the provision of cash collateral in the event that certain mechanisms are triggered (in particular the asset cover test and several mechanisms based on La Banque Postale’s credit ratings). A delay or operational inability to implement these mitigation measures, may affect the Issuer’s ability to make payments on the Notes in the required amount and/or on the corresponding due date.

The risk of the Borrower’s non-performance of activities on behalf of the Issuer is probable, but its impact would be limited.

Operational risks related to the implementation of the management and recovery plan in the event of default by the Borrower

In the event that La Banque Postale defaulted on its obligations, La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH would become the owner of a portfolio of home loans that it would have to continue to manage in order to make principal and interest payments to the investors that had purchased the Notes. For La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH, this would mean setting up an appropriate organisation.

In accordance with regulatory requirements, a plan has been drawn up describing the mechanism for transferring monthly home loan repayment streams in the case of a Borrower event of default.

There is a risk of no suitable successor being found within the necessary timeframe or of the successor not having sufficient experience or capacity to provide the service on the same or similar terms as those provided for in the covered bond programme documents or on financial terms acceptable to the successor. This could result in delays, additional costs and/or losses related to the recovery of amounts due to the Issuer in respect of its assets, or create operational and administrative difficulties for the Issuer, or have a negative impact on the Issuer’s ability to fulfil its obligations in relation to the Notes.

If the Issuer experienced a delay or was unable to implement these mitigation measures, this could affect its ability to make payments on the Notes in the required amount and/or on the due date.

The risk associated with the Borrower’s default seems unlikely but could have a high impact.

Interest rate risk

By design, the Issuer’s privileged liabilities are perfectly matched by its assets, consisting of collateralised loans granted to La Banque Postale.

The Issuer’s interest rate risk is limited to the reinvestment of capital. The Issuer maintains its medium-term capital investment policy, revealing a risk within the meaning of the EBA (duration 0 of capital) conventions applied as part of the monitoring of the sensitivity of the Economic Value of Equity (EVE). The Issuer’s residual position is a lending position, which exposes it to rising interest rates. This risk is currently moderate; an upward shock to interest rates of 2% would take EVE to -5.6%⁽¹⁾ at 31 December 2025. Apart from this residual exposure, the Issuer does not bear any interest rate risk.

Risk of a downgrade in the Programme’s rating and in the Notes issued by the Issuer

The Notes issued by the Issuer are currently rated AAA by Standard & Poor’s with a stable outlook. This rating is established according to the agency’s methodology, updated in July 2025, which includes the rating of French government debt and La Banque Postale’s rating. Major events such as a significant deterioration in the economic, budgetary, political or geostrategic environment could, in particular, result in a downgrading of France's sovereign rating by Standard & Poor's and/or of La Banque Postale due to its indirect dependence on France's rating. A downgrading of France's rating would, all other things being equal, lead to a downgrading of the La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH's programme. These factors could, in turn, lead to lower liquidity of the securities subscribed by investors; this scenario is unlikely in the very short term and its impact would be moderate.

1.2 Risks relating to the Borrower

Credit risk

Whenever La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH issues covered bonds, the principal of these issues is transferred to La Banque Postale in the form of loans guaranteed by a portfolio of home loans. La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH is therefore the Issuer under this mechanism and La Banque Postale is the Borrower. La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH is therefore exposed to a loan from La Banque Postale and may suffer financial losses in the event of default by La Banque Postale.

This credit risk is hedged by the Borrower pledging a portfolio of residential home loans. In the event of default by the Borrower, this portfolio would become the full property of the Issuer and should be used to meet the Issuer's financial commitments. French regulations lay down a series of provisions to ensure that the portfolio is of sufficient size and quality to ensure the timely repayment of coupons and nominal amounts.

This risk is highly unlikely, but the impact would be significant.

Risks relating to the Borrower's home loan origination capacity

La Banque Postale Group has been operating in a context marked by a more volatile international economic and financial environment, with shocks related to US policy (tariffs) but also domestic issues (collapse of the pension "conclave" negotiations, and problems with finalising a budget for 2026).

Geopolitical tensions also remain high and have deteriorated considerably since the outbreak of the war between Russia and Ukraine in February 2022, with the continuation of armed conflict between Ukraine and Russia, the war between Hamas and Israel and the conflict in the Middle East which began on 28 February 2026 and has resulted in a considerable increase in the price of oil. At the date of publication of the 2025 annual financial report, oil supply is reduced in the short term due to difficulties related to maritime traffic with the virtual blockage of the Strait of Hormuz, and fears have emerged about longer-term availability if facilities are permanently damaged. Broadly, two scenarios are emerging. If the conflict were to remain short-lived before coming to an end (for whatever reason), the rise in energy prices would remain temporary and would not pass downstream. On the other hand, if the conflict were to drag on or if production were to be prevented for a long time (e.g. obstruction of the Strait of Hormuz), this could weigh on global growth.

In times of crisis, La Banque Postale reinforces its usual monitoring across all its business activities (more frequent communication, adjustment of economic scenarios and quantification of impacts, etc.). La Banque Postale operates mainly on the French market and has international exposure through its insurance business. The main areas of concern are to ensure that development ambitions are achieved without any deterioration in profitability, given the increasing deterioration in credit quality (risk of default).

This more erratic political, economic and financial environment and the major uncertainty it produces could have a significantly adverse impact on La Banque Postale Group (including the Borrower) and its customers. In France in particular (La Banque Postale's domestic market which accounted for around 90% of its credit exposure at end-December 2025), any worsening of the economic environment would have an impact on:

- La Banque Postale Group's business plan, leading to reduced loan originations;

- The solvency position of the Borrower, including both individual customers (particularly vulnerable customers or those on low incomes of La Banque Postale) and business customers (whose ability to repay loans has deteriorated due to a decline in sales and their limited room for manoeuvre to pay higher expenses).

In addition, there could be commercial impacts: pressure on loan margins resulting in particular from changes in the cost of liquidity (given the uncertainty and volatility on the markets) could continue to affect the Borrower's profitability and increase the risk of a slowdown in loan origination (in a highly competitive environment).

A decline in home loan originations is a real risk that the Issuer needs to take into account in order to fulfil its regulatory obligations on an ongoing basis. The Issuer's privileged liabilities are secured by the Borrower's cover pool of home loans, which shall translate into an overcollateralisation rate of at least 105% of privileged liabilities.

The current overcollateralisation rate (128.2% at 31 December 2025), the existence of eligible home loans available to top up the cover pool and the possibility for the Issuer to call all or part of the callable issues subscribed by the Borrower itself are all factors enabling the Issuer to fulfil its commitments to investors. Additional liquidity may be pledged by the Borrower to the Issuer in order to contribute to the minimum cover requirements.

In view of the foregoing, the Issuer believes that this risk could occur, but that its impact could be low.

1.3 Risks relating to the Cover Pool

Credit risk related to home loan borrowers

The credit risk assessed on a transparent basis, i.e. linked to the cover pool, is the risk of financial loss arising from the inability of home loan borrowers to honour their contractual obligations. For La Banque Postale Home Loan SFH, this counterparty risk is borne by natural persons, as the assets making up the collateral pool consist of home loans to individual customers. Losses on this portfolio of home loans to individual customers as collateral could occur in the event of default by borrowers combined with a fall in the value of the immovable property provided as collateral.

In order to control this risk, La Banque Postale implements prudent lending rules in terms of borrower selection and financed transactions. In addition, in accordance with regulatory requirements, the Group Risk Department continuously monitors the credit risk on La Banque Postale's home loan portfolio.

In view of the foregoing, the Issuer believes that the likelihood of such a risk occurring is moderate and its impact should be low.

Risks associated with the decline in value of the underlying immovable property

The value of immovable property securing home loans may decline due to a number of factors, including the domestic or international economic environment, local economic or housing market conditions, changes in tax laws, mortgage interest rates, inflation, the availability of financing, returns on alternative investments, increased costs of utilities and other day-to-day expenses, political developments and government policies.

Climate risks can also have an impact on the value of immovable property if it is located in areas exposed to physical risks (flooding, storms, forest fires, swelling and shrinking of clay, coastal erosion, etc.). With respect to transition risks, governments may impose stricter regulations on buildings, renovations or leasing. This can result in additional costs for property owners and developers, affecting the value of the most exposed assets.

As immovable properties securing the home loans are located in France, their value may fall in the event of a general decline in house prices in the country. At 31 December 2025, 45% of the home loans in the cover pool (by value) were secured by mortgages (including 20% that were also secured by an additional guarantee from the French State).

A decline in property values could affect the Issuer's ability to obtain sufficient proceeds from the sale of the properties to comply with the regulatory minimum overcollateralisation rate and cover any outstanding amount owed by the underlying homebuyer. As a result, such a decline could affect the Issuer's ability to pay the full amount of principal and interest due on the Notes.

At 31 December 2025, the cover pool totalled €27,939 million and included 302,610 loans.

The current level of overcollateralisation (last certified at 134% as of 30 September 2025) and the current loan-to-value (LTV) ratio of 64% could reduce the impact of a fall in immovable property values. At 31 December 2025, outstanding loans representing a significant amount could still be pledged by the Borrower to the Issuer in order to mitigate the risk associated with the level of overcollateralisation and the repayment obligations towards bondholders. In addition, the Borrower could pledge additional liquidity to help meet the minimum cover requirement. Finally, some or all of the €6,250 million of Notes retained by La Banque Postale could be called by the Issuer.

In view of the foregoing, the Issuer believes that the occurrence of this risk is probable but that its impact should be low.

Credit risk related to providers of home loan guarantees

Defaults by homebuyers triggering claims under the collateral guarantee would expose the Issuer to credit risk in relation to the providers of the home loan guarantee (in respect of loans secured by said guarantees). At 31 December 2025, home loans underlying the collateral guarantee included loans secured by mortgages (45% of the total by value, including 20% also secured by an additional guarantee from the French State), loans secured by a guarantee from Crédit Logement (55%), and loans secured by an independent home loan guarantee company licensed to operate as a finance company in France.

If the home loan guarantee provider failed to pay all or part of the amounts due under the guarantee for any reason, or failed to pay such amounts on a timely basis, this could affect the Issuer's ability to make payments of principal and interest on the Notes.

The Issuer's privileged liabilities are guaranteed by the Borrower, providing a guarantee for a cover pool of home loans amounting to €27.9 billion at the end of December 2025. The latest certified regulatory coverage ratio (30 September 2025) stood at 134%, well above the legal minimum of 105%.

The Issuer ensures at all times that it has a portfolio of home loans secured by 1st ranking mortgages that are eligible for inclusion in the cover pool and could be added to the pool in order to ensure an appropriate level of security for investors.

Finally, the Issuer could also call all or part of the €5 billion of retained callable issues in order to have the necessary funds to fulfil its obligations to investors.

In view of the foregoing, the Issuer believes that the probability of such a risk occurring is low, but that the impact of such risk could be moderate.
